

International Leadership Programme

Training for heritage professionals from overseas to gain in-depth understanding of England's heritage protection legislation, process and management.

Discover Historic England's new intensive training course for heritage professionals from overseas. Gain in-depth understanding of the heritage protection system in England. From the listing process to conservation areas, our collaborative approach to heritage management at the local level to big stakeholder participation at World Heritage Sites, our team of experts will provide an introduction to England's heritage protection system.

In addition, each participant will have the opportunity to spend time with the expert responsible for the specialist area of their choice.¹

Hosted in London, with access to some of England's most iconic buildings and sites, this intensive course, over three days, will provide a unique training and networking opportunity for international heritage professionals.

Who is the course for?

Heritage Professionals or civil servants working in strategic roles within their national administrations.

How will you benefit?

The UK has a strong reputation for the quality, quantity and variety of its cultural heritage. Historic England is the national body responsible for the identification, protection and management of England's historic environment and greatly sought-after for the wealth of knowledge and experience of its staff. Aimed at heritage management professionals this course will also provide an on-going network of colleagues from across the world engaged in similar activities.
